This is a letter of reference for Jane Windsor, Esq. Ms Windsor was instrumental in obtaining appropriate accommodations for my son, Jake whom has dyslexia while he attended college about three years ago. Jake was attending a private school that had no idea he was legally entitled to accommodations because of his condition. The administration at this private college thought that only state run colleges had to make appropriate adjustments if an individual had disabilities.

Ms Windsor met with my son after reviewing his medical records, and advised him what to say to school officials. She also provided him with software to use to learn on his own, how to request those needed services, as well as what software to have the school put in place for exams. Jake went from failing tests to passing them with a few at the top of his class!

In addition, Ms Windsor coordinated all materials needed to successfully obtain Jake's accommodations with the FL DOH. Jake was granted double time during testing and a reader to ensure he understood the questions and potential answers. Jake was able to pass his final exam and his national board exam on his first sitting! Many of his classmates without any disabilities failed their board exam.

Needless to say, it is my pleasure to recommend the Windsor Law Firm for any parent or student because of her vast knowledge, attention to detail, professionalism, and dedication to help those that deserve to be treated fairly given their circumstance.

Sincerely,
